HOW TO DO A GEMBA WALK

A LEADER'S GUIDE

MICHAEL BREMER

While it's comforting to blame others, change actually starts with you. Do you wish to become a more effective leader?

Most leaders say, “People are our most important asset!” but day-to-day actions suggest they don't really believe it. Elite organizations (those few highly effective at improving) have one key difference from the rest. They significantly elevate the performance of average performers. It is a different way of operating than the norm.

Gemba walks provide an opportunity of discovery for walkers to change the way they lead as they learn.

The end result is a leader more in touch with reality, with a higher degree of humility and a leader who more effectively coaches team members to elevate the effectiveness of performance improvement activities.

WORKSHOP OVERVIEW

Much has been written about the need for doing Gemba Walks, but very little has been written on “How to Do it.”

This workshop will review walks in operations as well as in an office environment. Participants will have an opportunity to do two practical walks during this workshop. One on a topic selected by the host and the second on a topic selected by attendees

A respectful, effective Gemba Walk builds trust and lays the groundwork for a major transformation. It is amazing what one can learn during a walk. How can you be an effective leader and not want to do this?

“Participating in the recent How To Do a GEMBA Walk training day at Southern Cross Ceramics was one of the best practical training days I have attended. Michael Bremer provided a simple and effective approach to grasp and practise key leadership principles which allowed me to put them into action. I highly recommend this workshop and will be sending my staff to future workshops run by Michael.”
